

OXFORD UNIVERSITY COMPUTING LABORATORY
PRS ASSESSED WORK FORM

As part of your training and preparation for research, if you are intending to transfer to DPhil status, you are expected to do three pieces of assessed work in your first year (an assessment is either a lecture course or a term paper; at least one assessment must be a term paper, as described in the Graduate Research Student Handbook). If you are planning to transfer to MSc by Research status, you are expected to take two, both of which may be lecture courses. Your choice of assessment and the method of assessment (if different from the default for that course) are to be decided in discussion with your supervisor. If you take a course not organised by the department you will need to arrange for the course to be assessed and the mark for your course to be given to Julie Sheppard, although this will be followed up if the mark is not received. Please indicate on the form in the final column which method of assessment will be used (e.g. take home assignment, report to be assessed by supervisor) in case of a lecture course. Any proposal for partial or complete exemption from the coursework requirement must be justified and supported by your supervisor—and is subject to approval by the Director of Graduate Studies. Having already completed an MSc is not generally justification for exemption.

Please hand the completed and signed form to Julie Sheppard, the Secretary for Graduate Studies (room 112) no later than Monday of the third week of Michaelmas term (24th October, 2011).
