Codes of the Programs

In the following pages are the programs referred to in the correspondingly named chapters earlier in the book. They are transcribed as faithfully as circumstances permitted from originals composed and executed using an occam programming system.

In the transcription, the structure of the text has been removed, leaving only the sequence of lines which you see here. It is harder to read 'flat', un-folded occam on paper than it is to read a structured text using an editor that allows exploration of that structure. In recognition of this difficulty there is, on the title page of each section, a summary of the gross structure of the code which follows in that section.
